

Recently several individuals associated with Sinclair Broadcasting made an unwise decision to air political propaganda mislabeled as a "documentary." This misuse of the media is not in the national interest nor does it promote effective dialogue in the 10 days leading up to an important national election.

I am confident that FCC will take steps to stop this massive misuse of the media. Our democracy depends on the FCC protecting the American public from the current concentration of media ownership into the hands of a few. This outrage with Sinclair is an example of what happens when concentrated media ownership tries to influence the democratic political process by taking unfair advantage of their media ownership position.
